What went right:

- After figuring out how to set up pages, it because very easy to add additional pages to the project.
- After learning the environment, it's beginning to make much more sense.
- Setting up ER diagram for tables in the database was simple.

What went wrong:

- Setting up a database connection was more difficult than expected. We're still figuring out what option to pursue whether it be local or remote, and then if remote, which service.
- Sometimes we came across errors we couldn't explain, only to have them fix themselves with a quick restart.
- A team member was sick, causing some delayed tasks.
- Conflicts of schedules led to cancelled meetings.
- Lack of/no communication from some teammates.
- Lack of/no effort from some teammates.

Missed risks:

- Unfamiliarity with certain aspects of setting up databases.
- Project complexity underestimated.
- Team members being unavailable.
